

‘Preparing today for a better future, using the lessons of the past’

At LHS we believe that History matters. We aim to teach an authentic History that reflects the student body, which students are engaged with. We want students to see the wider importance of what they have learned about the past - making links to the world today. We aim to teach a varied curriculum, which takes significant events, people, themes, and experiences from the past and inspires students, building an understanding of the world they live in.

We want to teach a curriculum which builds hope, showing students examples of individuals and groups resisting oppression, to teach our students to spot discrimination and avoid being bystanders. We also teach students the confidence and communication skills to stand up for what they believe in. We want students to be informed about community they are from, to foster respect and tolerance for everyone.

We teach students that History is a construct, a deliberate storytelling of the past, constructed in many cases by those in power, and how efforts to change this have been made. We consider how history is actively remembered and why views about events in the past have changed. Students will learn how to effectively consider debates about the past, form arguments, and to use and challenge evidence to support their views, all important skills across the curriculum, and for life after Little Heath.

We believe in celebrating success and progress in history, and hope to encourage students to have a thirst for knowledge; to understand how historical enquiry works and be eager to find out more about the past.

Our Key Principles of History:

- Engaging with current academic writing and research to ensure curriculum is responsive and engaging
- Using enquiry questions to create curiosity; questions which are genuine and authentic
- Developing students’ understanding of the historical concepts of causation, consequence, change and continuity, similarity and difference, historians’ interpretations of the past, and using historical evidence
- Teaching diverse history – reflecting the diversity of the school and local community; and including the ‘forgotten’ history of minority groups. Using studying the past to understand and challenge discrimination and racism today
- Building strong relationships with students to encourage positive behaviour for learning and students taking responsibility for becoming successful historians, and ensure lessons are accessible and challenging to all
- Supporting students to develop communication skills through modelling successful writing and providing examples of written work
- Supporting students to successfully recall and apply knowledge from previous lessons, topics, and years, building a rich knowledge of the past and the skills needed to be successful historians
- Providing timely, meaningful, and supportive feedback to work to help students achieve their potential

KS3 History Curriculum Overview (Year 7 & 8)

History at LHS is delivered by specialist historians, passionate about engaging students with a broad, diverse, and coherent curriculum, rooted in engaging with academic scholarship to deliver the best outcomes for students. We teach a balance of global, European, and British history – students learn about significant changes, individuals, and themes from 200BC to modern day, and consider the interconnections between people and places in the past.

KS4 History Curriculum Overview (Year 9, 10 & 11)

At GCSE students study the Edexcel specification, which offers a variety of national and international history, allowing students to learn about important periods and themes in history. They explore how crime, policing and punishment has changed since 1000AD, considering the factors that drive the changes and continuities they identify. They learn about two fascinating kings, the Plantagenet Richard and John, whose reigns saw several important developments in British and world history. Students discover the importance of the development of nuclear technology, and the defining events of the Cold War, right up to the fall of the Soviet Union in 1991. Students also learn about the rise of Hitler and the Nazi dictatorship in Germany. Throughout these units, students not only build a wealth of knowledge about the past, but also develop important skills in interrogating and investigating evidence, and an understanding of how historians construct their views about the past. Through studying history students develop important writing and literacy skills, skills in arguing and analysing arguments, and vital understanding of the world today.

KS5 History Curriculum Overview (Year 12 & 13)

At A Level, history students study the OCR A specification, which offers a good range of history both in terms of the historical periods and the places. Students learn both about the reign of Elizabeth I, and the Vietnam War. The A Level is excellent preparation for further study of History, but also in the development of essential skills in writing, arguing, analysing, and evaluating. Students develop a greater understanding of several key themes in history, such as the nature of power, conflict, empire, and revolution; they study significant events in British and world history, as well as considering in greater depth how the history of these events has been constructed and debated by historians.

KS5 Politics Curriculum Overview (Year 12 & 13)

Students study the Edexcel specification, which allows students to explore themes such as power, democracy, sovereignty, globalisation & political ideologies. Students spend most of year 12 studying UK Government & UK Politics. These units allow students to develop an understanding of the way that people and politics in the UK interact as well as the location & exercise of power in the UK. Towards the end of Year 12, students are introduced to the final 2 units – ideologies & Global politics. These allow students to develop an understanding of the core ideas & principles of 4 ideologies as well as a wider understanding of politics at an international level, including the nature & extent of state sovereignty and how states exercise power on a global stage. Students develop skills such as arguing, analysing, evaluating & coming to judgements based on competing ideas. This A-Level gives students the skills and knowledge to study politics further at University as well as a greater understanding of their role in the political system.

Enrichment Activities

In History we aim to spark students’ curiosity, and help students see that there is always going to be more to the study of history than we are able to fit into 2, 5 or 7 years!

We run house competitions each year, including:

- The Great Black Britons competition
- The Historical Easter Egg competition
- Year 7 castles competition

We also run a Film club, especially when students are keen to watch and discuss historical films related to what they are learning about. We support students who might also want to do this at home by providing ‘read-watch-listen’ lists for every topic we teach.

We plan trips depending on availability, value, and the school calendar. In the last few years, we have run fantastic trips to the National Archives and Westminster Abbey, the Guardian Media Education Centre, to A Level conference and lecture days in London, and we are planning a KS3 trip to the British Museum.

We work with RE to run an enrichment day on capital punishment through time, and its abolition in Britain, for our GCSE students.

We also collaborate with other schools, including a revision conference for one of our A Level courses with two other schools.

We encourage students to read history books and historical fiction to cultivate their interest in history. A list of all of the books in the school library and which historical period they link to can be found here: <https://sites.google.com/site/historyatlhs/key-stage-3/reading-list>

We also have a read-watch-listen list for every topic, so students can enhance their knowledge and sense of period in interesting and accessible ways in their own time.
