Louise is really excited to be performing in this year's National Theatre Connections production of Cloud Busting by Helen Blakeman (based on the novel by Malorie Blackman). This is a powerful, youth-led theatre production presented by Berzerk Productions.

Cloud Busting is a play about friendship, belonging, and the pressures young people face when trying to fit in. It explores bullying, peer influence, and the importance of empathy, while celebrating imagination, individuality, and connection.

This play speaks directly to the real experiences of young people. Theatre helps to challenge perspectives, encourages understanding, and creates space for important conversations about kindness, identity, and the impact of our choices.

Louise would love your support. Please support your peers by coming along to watch this performance and celebrate young people telling stories that matter on stage.
